DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Evans et al 6,234,261 in view of Singh et al 2003/0192721.

Evans discloses a drill bit (figure 7) for use in earth boring. The bit has a threaded upper section connectable to a power source. A shank section 112 has a top end secured to the threaded section and an outer surface defining a plurality of blades 126 extending downwardly. A lower portion 128,130 extends parallel to the axis and has a plurality of notches for receiving cutter members 32. The lower part of the bit has three cones. The cones extend outwardly to the lower portion of the shank. Cutting buttons 32 are formed from polycrystalline diamond. The cutting members are in the notches formed in the blades and cooperate with the blades to drill a substantially uniform hole. Evans is considered he claimed features except for the cutting members 32 being formed from carbide. Singh teaches that it is common in the drilling industry to form the cutting members from either polycrystalline diamond or tungsten carbide. It would have been obvious to form the cutting members 32 of Evans et al from tungsten carbide as taught by Singh et al since Singh teaches that it is common to form cutting members from diamond or carbon depending upon the type of formation being drilled. As to claim 2, the shank section is rectangular. As to claim 3, the cutting members 32 are imbedded in the notches. As to claims 4,8 and 11, cutting members 32 are spaced equidistant from one another. As to claims 5,9 and 12, the shank diameter is substantially equal to the cone diameter. As to claim 7, the cutting members 32 are arranged so that the shank section will maintain a smooth outer surface.
